An Old Hayseeder.

Cole Atherton boasts of being the oldest hay yard man in the city, and he is doubtless correct. When the mothers in this city were running about in short clothes, Cole Atherton was a leading authority on hay, and he has been largely identified with the hay yard business ever since. He knows as much about different kinds of hay as M. Cohn does about silks and velvets, and can tell first, second and third crop of alfalfa with his eyes shut.

He is back once more in the business, and rain or shine, he can be seen banging about the country on a buckboard hunting sixteen different kinds of hay for his customers, who are fastidious and want certain kinds and no other.

When Atherton dies, his tombstone will be cut in the shape of a bale of hay, with the age of the deceased marked on the stick.

Bill Nye.

A large crowd are going to Reno next Monday to hear the greatest of American humorists Bill Nye and his famous partner Burbank.

Nye, funny as he is in his letters is about ten times as funny when he walks on to a stage. His very appearance makes the audience howl and as soon as he talks the house goes into convulsions.

Everyone who has not seen him should not miss the opportunity.

The round trip including admission is only $2.50 and tickets can be secured of Mr. Holesworth Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate.

The Foote Dramatic Company.

We are to have a full week of theatre beginning tomorrow night, with the Foote Dramatic company.

They have a fine repertoire of standard plays, and it will be refreshing to see them after the "skits" that have shown up in Carson from time to time.

A company that will play a straight week in Carson realizes that it has something worth the public attention.

Miss Plunkett as leading lady shows good work at the head, as she comes from a famous family of dramatic artists.
